OVERCOMING OBSTACLES WITH AN ATTITUDE OF GRATITUDE!!

with Kathy Korell-Rach

SMOKE N SPARKS
BAR THREE STABLES
GERALD & IVA KORELL

God blessed me immensely when he put me in the right family. While my barrel racing road has not always been pleasant (in fact, it's been outright grueling and heart-breaking at many points), I have been fortunate to be able to throw my leg over some of the most talented, athletic, big-hearted horses in the industry. All of this is because of my parents, Gerald and Iva Korell, who own Bar Three Stables and presently stand nationally-ranked barrel horse sire Smoke N Sparks.

Smoke N Sunshine, "Shine," is certainly an answer to prayers. Two years ago, I had three amazing mares winning almost everything I entered. I quickly filled my WPRM permit and was ready to hit the road. In a matter of a few months, all three sustained career-ending injuries and I was left with a huge hole in my life. I put all of my hopes into last year's futurity horse, who also missed the year due to injuries. Mom is a much better trainer than me, so I don't typically get babies until they are ready to add speed. However, I desperately wanted something to ride and Shine came to me early. It is amazing Shine came to me at all. The only reason I have her is that no one thought she was worth $10,000 and Dad finally took her off the market when she was three. Many of my horses have been other people's rejects, but I certainly don't mind shopping in the bargain bin at Bar Three Stables!

I stayed home most of last year because I didn't want to chance infection from the VS and EHV-1 crises. Shine was all business from the beginning and pretty much made herself; she won the Open 1D in her very first run for money and has pulled a check in all but seven runs thus far. It is clear that she loves her job and consistently gives me a smooth, fair go every time. She is amazingly sensitive and responsive. The chief drawback of this is that the only brush I can use on her without experiencing "angry alligator" is the softest goat hair brush I could find. Somehow, I think it's worth it.

We were at the top end of both go's at our first futurity, but didn't place in the money. Our second futurity was at the SW Desert Classic, where we were fourth in the Open 1D average (10th in the first go, 2nd in the second go), fourth in the Breeder's Incentive 1D average (8th in first go, 2nd in second go), and won my very first saddle for winning the Non-Pro average.

The Colorado Classic was our third futurity, and it almost didn't happen. I was in a rollover accident where I totaled my vehicle the week before the futurity. I feel humbled that my life was spared, and I walked away with a laceration on my left arm to the bone and into the elbow joint. My father is an amazing horseman, and I'm convinced that he can make a better run on her cold than I can after all this time. I did my best to persuade him to run, but his knee said "no". We also asked Wendy McKee, who has a herd of incredible Smoke N Sparks offspring, but she was going to be somewhere else that weekend. Thank goodness my wonderful husband, Gabriel Rach, is such a support and also an "enabler." Gabe started saddling her for me two days after the accident and I rode in a sling for a few days. Dad said, "You know we would never ask a horse to run in that shape," and he's right, but luckily I'm not a horse!

Mom came down and was my groom all weekend. She is the only reason I was able to get to the arena. Shine proved just how remarkable she is because she more than compensated for my deficits. She was Reserve Champion in the Open Futurity 1D Average (3rd first go, 8th second go), Champion in the Stallion Incentive 1D Average (1st first go, 4th second go), Champion in the Amateur Average (won both first and second go), and fourth in the Futurity Slot Race adding another $6,191.00 to her LTE. It is surreal that we hung tough with the depth and quality of the horses and riders that were there, and I am grateful for our success. I feel so proud and fulfilled to take a homegrown baby and showcase her to the rest of the world the way she deserves.

To date, Shine has won over $18,000 and I hope we can keep that total increasing. I sincerely appreciate our team, which includes: Jason Collins (for his farrier skills, continuing to answer his phone after my almost daily calls at times, and his willingness to fit me in to fix the multitudes of problems a wet Colorado spring brings), Dr. Joe Stricklin (for keeping her as healthy as possible), Dr. David McClain (for his magic chiropractor fingers for Shine and me, always fitting us in quickly, and understanding "barrel racer panic"), and Dr. Pamela Muhonen (for her acupuncture and manual manipulation expertise and rescuing her from the situations she seems to get herself into).

I also keep her healthy with Forco, which I feed daily for the many gastrointestinal and conditioning benefits it gives her. It's a reasonably priced and highly palatable supplement; from our experience, there's nothing better out there. Because Shine's skin is so sensitive, I can't use traditional cooling and muscle relaxing liniments. Instead, I use a home-made concoction of witch hazel and Young Living essential oils along with ice. She responds extremely well to essential oils and I combine them with the Masterson Method, acupuncture, and massage to keep her body as supple and strong as possible. I don't have any sponsors to thank, but I would love to get some...hint, hint!

Of course, I can't forget the main man that is responsible for Shine's creation. Smoke N Sparks is an excellent sire and has produced numerous champions in every type of barrel racing venue for a variety of rider styles, ages, and experience levels. He has been a top 20 Equi-Stat Barrel Sire for several consecutive years with limited get numbers and many of his prodigy's earnings going unreported because of location. In addition to the multiple futurity and derby champions from most major competitions, his offspring continue to be successful long-term. He has rodeo winners, the most notable being Cleo (RF Firefly), which is a two-time NFR qualifier and go round winner with earnings in excess of $400,000. He also sired College National Finals Rodeo Champion Let It Smoke and multiple National High School Finals Rodeo qualifiers. There are several recent arena record setters, including Julias Jewels, Little Dragon Slayer, WM Smoke On Water, Lil Snoop Dog, and TDL Smoke N Ice. "Sparks" has certainly cemented his place in barrel racing history as a top sire. Although he is 23 years old, he is in excellent condition and his semen ships extremely well. We will not be keeping any frozen semen, so don't wait too long to get your own Smoke N Sparks baby.

Overall, I sincerely appreciate all of the gifts in my life, and Shine is certainly near the top of that list. I still admire her every day as she grazes in the pasture and feel humbled each time I'm in the saddle. I believe she is one of those special horses of a lifetime, and I aim to keep demonstrating that as long as I possibly can.

2nd ANNUAL COLORADO CLASSIC FUTURITY

The 2nd Annual Colorado Classic Futurity, Derby and Open held June 19-21 in Colorado Springs, CO paid out over $79,000 in just three short days. After overcoming the historical amounts of rain Colorado has had over the past month and moving the event inside - the competition was top-notch with everyone running for a part of the payout!

Futurity and Derby entries increased from last year's event to run at the $53,553 payout between the open and stallion incentive futurities, derby, amateur futurity side pot, futurity slot race, Vista Equine Breeders Futurity and stallion owners' payout bonus.

Kelsey Lutjen rode TS Hayday Returns owned by Tom Stockton to the Open Futurity Championship and $4,590 in earnings. They were 2nd in Round 1, 6th in Round 2 and won the average of the extremely tough race for $3,204. They also placed third in the futurity slot race for an additional $1,386. They took home many prizes including a custom saddle sponsored by Leader Change, LLC and Darkelly.

Jordan Bassett and Buggin To Be Fab won the futurity slot race when they smoked a 14.817 in the second round and carried that time to the slot race for $2,079. This run also placed them third in round two for an additional $940, bringing their weekend total to $3,019.

The big money winners of the weekend were Kathy Korrel Rach and Smoke N Sunshine sired by Smoke N Sparks. This duo was the Reserve Futurity Champions, Stallion Incentive Futurity and the Amateur Futurity Champions, and placed 4th in the futurity slot race to bring home $6,191. The Korrel family also owns Smoke N Sparks so they won an additional $822 for Smoke N Sunshine's wins and a custom A Cut Above Knife for being champion stallion owners!

Monica McClung rode Streakin French TJ to the 2D Futurity and Stallion Incentive Futurity Championships. Streakin French TJ is sired by Colorado Classic stallion, A Streak Of Fling and won $1632 for their weekend efforts.

Horses bred through the Vista Equine breeding or embryo transfer program were eligible to run in the $500 added Vista Equine Breeders Futurity Side Pot which also awards a custom saddle. Jennifer Sharp jockeyed KR Famous Taquilla to this championship for $502 and also placed in the first round of the open futurity and stallion incentive futurity for an additional $779!

Samantha Flannery and LA Frenchman have been on a roll winning multiple derbies and open championships this spring and summer and continued their winning ways in the Horse Hair Analysis Derby. They won the first round of the derby, placed third in the second round and won the average for $1,831!

It was a fantastic event and we would like to thank our sponsors: Horse Hair Analysis, Formula 707, Arrow A Ranch Performance Horses and Busby Quarter Horses and all of our stallion owners for their support in helping us put on this year's event. We are already looking forward to 2016!

KELSEY LUTJEN - TS HAYDAY RETURNS

TS Hayday Returns, better known as Hayday is owned by Tom and Vickie Stockton of Kiowa CO. I made the 12 hour drive to Colorado Springs and it turned out to be well worth it! I won 2nd in the first round and 6th in the second round. She got by the first a little both runs, but she's a very gritty mare and still clocks because she NEVER quits trying! We won the average and third in the slot race. It was extra special because Tom was able to come and watch! He hadn't seen us run in person until the Colorado Classic.

DO YOU KNOW THE SIGNS?

It was Spring. Now it's Summer. And it's Hot!

It's time for salt. It's time for caution. It's time to know the signs of fatigue, dehydration, exhaustion, heat stress and anhidrosis. All should alarm the astute horseman who knows how quickly these avoidable dangers can become killers.

When a horse is not in condition, it doesn't take much hot weather exercise to produce fatigue.

The warning signs of fatigue are slow heart rate recovery, elevated heart rate for more than an hour, high respiratory rate – often shallow and inefficient. Take the horse's temperature about every 30 minutes. If it is not dropping toward normal – 90 to 100 degrees Fahrenheit – you've got problems.

Dehydration can be seen in lack of skin elasticity, prolonged capillary refill time, lack of intestinal sounds and pale, dry mucous membranes. Provide slow sips of cool water over a period of time until the horse refuses to drink. Dehydration should then be disappearing.

Exhaustion and heat stress warning signs include depression, disinterest in his surroundings, muscle cramping or tremors, or muscle twitching and a lack of appetite or thirst.

A lack of conditioning is usually a factor contributing to heat stress and exhaustion, so increase the horse's work load slowly during the summer. To determine the danger of heat stress, simply add the current temperature to the current percent of humidity. In Arizona, for example, a temperature of 104 added to a humidity percentage of 9 equals 113 and is well below the bench mark of 120, so the horse's normal cooling mechanisms will be sufficient unless the horse is obese or still has a winter coat.

If the temperature and humidity sum is higher than 140 the horse will rely on sweating to dissipate body heat. If the sum is greater than 150, the horse's cooling system is going to be severely compromised. And if the sum is more than 180 the horse's system isn't going to be able to function, the internal temperature will continue to rise and the result will be severe heat stress.

When suffering heat stress the horse loses fluids through sweating, steadily declining toward dehydration. The dehydration reduces blood flow to the skin and the body reacts by limiting the sweat to conserve body fluids. Heat continues to build with no relief and the horse declines into exhaustion. Such a horse will need fluid administered by a veterinarian.

A horse suffering anhidrosis has lost the ability to sweat. When a horse doesn't sweat, he can't cool himself. The horse tries to pant, but doesn't do a very good job at it, so his body temperature continues to rise and his performance declines.

The cause of anhidrosis is not understood. A horse can be on a well-balanced diet with enough salt and electrolytes, drink enough water, and still not sweat.

Anhidrotic horses will pant just as a salt-starved horse will, in an attempt to dissipate heat. For the anhidrotic horse, a product – One AC—has been quite successful. It does work better on some horses than others. For many anhidrotic horses the only solution is to be moved to a cooler climate.

Salt-starved horses which do not sweat will begin to sweat again and return to normal several weeks after they have been supplemented with up to three ounces of loose salt per day. (Once a horse is sweating normally, two ounces of salt per day in hot weather should be sufficient at a normal work load.)

Loose salt is better for horses than salt blocks since a horse's tongue is smooth. It is hard for the horse to get enough salt from a block. When a horse is salt deprived, it is common for a horse to attempt to chew chunks from a salt block.

Salt deficiency is associated with fatigue, dehydration, heat stress and exhaustion.

So the next time you say, "Wow, it's hot," try to remember your horse is worth his salt... and see that he gets it!

'TIP OF THE MONTH' - with KELSEY LUTJEN

I think a big thing I like to see in my colts is confidence. When I start a colt, I really like to keep lots of confidence and keep them liking their job. We do have to apply some pressure so they can learn to handle it but we have to be careful not to ask for too much and knock that colt's confidence. Some take more than others but you have to know your horse. A lot of colts will start to add speed on their own as they are comfortable to do so. Some of the best horses I have rode are very arrogant and they have an amazing amount of confidence in themselves and I think that's what makes them great. I like respect, but never try to take that "spark" away.

EXERCISE INTOLERANCE: Part 1

THE UPPER AIRWAY

The respiratory system is second only to the musculoskeletal system as a cause of lost training in racehorses. Multiple body systems may be responsible for exercise intolerance. Many horses have more than one body system affected, making determination of the relative contribution of each system difficult. Upper respiratory sources of exercise intolerance are common in all breeds of horses. The frequency of specific conditions, the degree to which each condition limits performance, and the method of treatment and corresponding success vary with the breed, age, and intended use of the horse. As a general rule, horses engaged in racing have the highest requirements for airflow and show exercise intolerance with lesions that may be inapparent during examinations performed at rest. Horses engaged in less strenuous activities require more airway obstruction before performance limitation is apparent. These lesions are usually apparent at rest.

The upper airway accounts for the majority or total respiratory resistance during exercise. Resistance to airflow is inversely proportional to the radius of the airway to the fourth power. Therefore small reductions in airway size lead to large increases in airway resistance. Increases in airway resistance require increased respiratory work to generate the same airflow.

Airway obstruction leads to the generation of airway noise as a result of tissue vibration and turbulent airflow. Obstructions of the upper airway are accompanied by noise in all horses, although not all horses with airway noise have exercise intolerance. The presence of airway noise increases the likelihood that airway obstruction is responsible for the exercise intolerance compared to horses that show poor performance without respiratory noise. For many causes of upper airway obstruction, the noise is characteristic. Trainers and owners are valuable sources for information and careful questioning can lead to a strong suspicion for a certain condition before examining the horse.

Endoscopy using a flexible fiber endoscope or videoendoscope is essential for diagnosis. This allows the veterinarian to determine the location of the problem and the severity of the inciting cause.

Treadmill examination can be helpful in some instances. Treadmill exercise evaluations allow for simultaneous evaluation of the musculoskeletal, cardiac, and respiratory systems. Videoendoscopy allows for direct visualization of the airway during exercise. Treadmill examination offers the additional advantage of providing objective measurements of fitness levels to differentiate poor conditioning as a cause of exercise intolerance. Exercising under tack or harness to simulate conditions under which the owner or trainer reports the noise to occur can be helpful as well. Numerous examples exist of intermittent airway obstructions that occur only during exercise and that are demonstrable only during videoendoscopy on a treadmill. These cases are few in proportion to all the horses examined for airway obstruction. The majority of upper airway obstructions can be diagnosed using history, signalment, endoscopy, and other techniques available to your veterinarian. Treadmill evaluation is indicated for those horses showing airflow limitation or airway noise that cannot be identified by endoscopy at rest or after exercise.

Tom Hutchins DVM

Silverado Equine Performance, LLC was established in 2013. With 15 years experience in the performance horse industry, Dr. Hutchins' goal was to create a practice that fulfilled a special niche: provide the absolute best care available for each horse with all necessary diagnostic tools available for your equine athlete and be able to bring it to you in the comfort of your farm or stable. The scope of the practice is primarily lameness and sports medicine although other services are available upon request. This allows Dr. Hutchins to stay on the leading edge of performance medicine. It takes a team to keep a finely tuned athlete going, so when necessary, recommendations and referrals to the most qualified professionals for a given condition are made.

Endoscopic examination should be performed in the unsedated horse in a systematic manner such that the entire upper airway is examined. Examination should not stop at confirmation of the suspected lesion because some horses have more than one problem. The examiner should ascertain whether the lesion in question is compatible with the history and the signs that the horse is exhibiting.

Some conditions are not apparent at rest. Exercising the horse under tack or harness under the conditions in which the owner or trainer reports the problem is helpful. Endoscopic examination is then performed at the conclusion of exercise. Racehorses may be examined on the track during training by waiting near the finish line to hear any noise generated and to perform an endoscopic exam at the termination of work.

The following list is not all inclusive; rather, it covers the most common upper respiratory causes of exercise intolerance in performance horses in descending order of frequency. Differences in clinical presentation and response to therapy in horses engaging in different activities can create some overlap in diagnostic perception.

- Laryngeal Hemiplegia
- Dorsal Displacement of the Soft Palate
- Epiglottic Entrapment
- Epiglottic Hypoplasia
- Arytenoid Chondritis
- Ethmoid Hematomas
- Pharyngeal Cysts
- Hyperkalemic Periodic Paralysis
- Maxillary Sinus Cysts
- Guttural Pouch Empyema and Retropharyngeal Abscesses
- Alar Fold Obstruction
- Nasal Collapse

The respiratory system is a frequent cause of exercise intolerance in performance horses. Labored breathing, fatigue during performance and prolonged recovery after exercise are common complaints. Inadequate fitness level and diseases of the cardiovascular system are differential diagnoses that share these complaints and should be investigated. Generation of increased airway noise is a clinical sign that implicates the upper respiratory system. A careful history from the owner, trainer, and endoscopy of the upper airway are the most useful tools. Endoscopy during exercise on a treadmill is indicated when the airway lesion is not apparent with endoscopy at rest. Treatment of the respiratory obstruction may differ with the level of performance required.

POTOMAC HORSE FEVER

Record-breaking rains, resulting in standing water, may trigger an outbreak of Potomac Horse Fever. It is believed that horses contract Potomac fever by accidentally ingesting aquatic insects that carry the bacteria. The bacterium that causes the fever is present in water that is home to fresh water snails, insect larvae and other insects. Researchers have confirmed one route of exposure to horses is the accidental ingestion of aquatic insects such as mayflies and dragonflies.

The fever is more common in the east; but because of record breaking rainfall in the southwest, there is an abnormal amount of standing water, which provides habitat for aquatic insects.

In addition to the fever, Potomac horse fever also causes diarrhea, depression, no appetite, swelling in the lower legs and laminitis. Mares in foal may abort. Most horses that die succumb to dehydration, septic shock or severe symptoms related to the laminitis.

Potomac horse fever is not transmittable from horse-to-horse.

If the disease is caught early, treatment with antibiotics can help fight off the disease. Intense supportive care is mandatory, which includes plenty of fluids, proper diet and anti-inflammatory drugs.

Because of false positives Potomac horse fever is difficult to detect using antibody tests. The best diagnostic tests are by finding the organism in the white blood cell using a microscope, or by doing a PCR (polymerase chain reaction) test on the manure or blood.

There is a preventative vaccine available through veterinarians that helps protect horses against Potomac horse fever, but it is not 100% effective. Horses that are vaccinated may need a booster. Vaccinated horses can still get the disease; but they may have a less intense reaction and recover quicker. Check with your veterinarian for a vaccination schedule.

What's also effective is controlling where your horse drinks, grazes and eliminating standing water. Preventing contamination of feed and water by the adult insects is imperative. By providing stock tanks, buckets or automatic waterers it is easier to keep the containers free of the insects that transport the disease to horses. Daily cleaning lessens the opportunity for a horse to accidentally swallow an insect. Do not put feeders or waterers under lights that are on all night. The lights attract the insects. Keep lights shut off in the barn at night to prevent insects from entering the building.

Try to not allow your horse to graze along side standing water, streams or ponds. The insects will be more prominent in these areas. Draining and filling in areas that have standing water will eliminate places for aquatic insects to breed and thrive.

The aquatic insects are usually active starting late April and continue to hatch through the end of July.

Potomac horse fever is not a disease limited to the east coast. Prevention, management and observation can protect your horse no matter where you live.
